TRUT - The army correspondents of the Cincinrati papers have written most interesting and soldiers la eastern Kentucky, but they are attl cled with a chronic disposition to detract from the loyalty of the Union men in that region. One of these excellent writers, said to be the Rev. Mr. Gaddis, chaplain of the 2d Obio, in his recent correspondence for the Commercial, while complimenting Gen. Nelson in most deserved terms, emplains that the Union men of Eastern Kentucky did not sympathize with him sufficiently. Union men there, but when it comes to taking a positive stand, it is 'Good Lord or good davil' that, but if the eccesh triumph they are on that "Frue," ha says, 'we found many good friends, but they were only the exceptions." We cannot better do our duly towards exonerating ur friends in that quarter of the State than by quoting their n ble and truthful defence, as made by the Maysville Engle. That paper says:
"The charges against the Union men of Extern Kentucky are most nry set and entirely untrue. Kentucky already has her full quots in the camp and in the field, although recruiting commenced in the State about ten weeks ago, and this under the many disadvantages State is within the Confederate lines and recruiting in such counties thus rendered exceedingly deficult. The Ninth Congressional District 1 of only gave the largest Union vote of any in the State, but it has nobly responded to the call to arms. It has now full thirty-five hundred men in the field as brave and patriotic as can be found anywhere in the wide world. The District has already given more Union soldiers in proportion to its Union vote than any District in the Northern States, and before the wer greater than our fair proportion. We have furernment has been abla to arm and supply them with food and clothing; but, though suffering intensely, our brave boys have borne up nuder hardships without a murmer, and their onthusiasm and zeal have continued nuchilled by the neglect of the Government. They have endured

THE BEON FOR THE NATIONAL Artron.—It is know at the artist, Rogers. was commissioned some years ago by our Gov ament to model and have cast in bronze folding doors for the Capitel. The abors have just has seen them gives the following description of the designs which ornament them:

the designs which ornament them:

The bronze doors intended for the Capitol at Washington, designed and modeled at Rome, by the American artist, Reger, have lately been on view at the Royal Foundry, where they were cust. The workmapship, as I always the case with whatever emanates from the Munich foundry, is admirable. There is a shaspness in the luce, and a finish in the minutest detail, which are in the highest degree creditable. Of the dors themsalves is in not say to convey an at quase idea by a mere discription; for an enumeration of all that is represented might induce the build that there was a crowding of objects, and that the allotted space was overtilled; and this is not the case. Each door— he whole forms a folding dor—is divided into four compariments or panels. Thus, within a semi-circular space show, which has the breadth of both the doors together, there are nine division, in each of which an important moment of C turmbus's life is represented. The figures at and cut in fall relief, and some of the groups are eminently successful. The crown-in groups are eminently successful.

the groups are eminently euccessful. The crowning event of the discoverer's career occupies the commanding spot over the top of the doors. Her Columbue. standing on a muint, forms the central figure. He has just landed from a boat, and with the standard of Arragon and Castile planted on the new soil, and with sword upraised in his right hand, he takes possession of the land in the name of his sovereigns. Some beaturen are still in the skiff, others are kneeling on the shore, while a group of Indians, peeping from hebind a tree on the epposite side, lock on in wondering saterishment. In one compartment is represented the triumphal entry of Columbus into Madrid on his first return from America, amid crawds of gazers at him, the hero of the triumph, and at the Indians, who preceds the procession with parequets on their paralsed arms.

The next panel is occupied with a sadder story. Here Celumbus, in chairs, surrounded by a sorrowing populator, is alread to embark for Europe. Then, the "last secane of all," accompil bing his "strange, event ful history," we see him on his deathbed, attended only by a nun and some priests, who administer to him the consolations of religion. His eon stards beside him. In the thickness of the dare itself inches are formed, at certain intervals, and in these are small whole-length figures of the great compressive, and warriors. In the centre, close to each other, are two such lines of niches, while, on both sider, as single row of figures, cre above the other, fills up the intermedial espace between the auther edge of the panels and they despess. The large bases, so often seen on doors, are here the heads of those historians who have written on the discovery of America.

The crnaments below each niche are heads of animals indigeneus to the country, will fraits and flower entwined, also characteristic of the New World. Every ornsment is appropriate, and though they are manifold, there is no confusion. As there will be no obarts of the would have a good an occasion effect for making his work known, and the Americas would surely not be mayiling to show the world how munificant they had come forward to erect a great national moun

They have enduryd the services after new things, none of their full share of the fatigues of the campaign uncomplainingly, and when exposed to the fire of the enemy, as they have been most liberally, all induffiled and badly equipped as they were, they proved to the satisfaction of all that Kentucky blood has not degenerated."

"Nor is it true that the Union men of Ean-multiple of the contract of the volunteers, have a a garden of their shifting, outside of the volunteers, have as a garden of their shifting. Which is few years that the the cases. On the contracty, we know that their has been assisted by them to the extent of their shifting. He was not the contract of their shifting. WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1861.

We surrender the larger portion of our available pare this morning to the President's Message. As we at this writing have seen only a fragment of the message we of course have formed no opinion concerning the paper. Is will be read by everybody with the deepest

In the first column of the first l'art o the paper of Dr. Breckinridge, as published in our columns, it is stated, as part of the illustration founded on the "Mountain Lupuie that peace cannot be made except ou that asis of a single National Government, - hat the 'Mountain Empire" cmbraces 30,1001 square miles. It should read 300), (NON) squa e r 7 s The mistake-we cannot tell how committedmakes that particular argument appear to be only one tenth part as strong as it really is.

There are some other proveking and maccountable typographical errors in the first Part of this great peper, which, like the one noticed above, unfortunately eagal ed detection until after the whole paper was published in our Weekly. They are, however, such as a critical reader will readily take for what they are, and such as an uncritical reader will

THE KENTICKY SENATORS—James Guthrie, whom some Kentuckians rame for I. S. Senat r, is the live embodiment of the occession idea in the form of state neutrality. That is not all. He was the great feeder of the rebels by his rails ad, long after the preclamation of the President prohibiting commercial interceurse with them. He was, in the meanwhile, percoally in ignant to ward the North, as he always has been excepting when he wanted to sell hi railway bonds in urmarket, and den more das "fools, with certain effectives prefixed which we do not care to repeat) all Northern itale, men and Lottors who defined the consistency of state neutrality with Federal sovereignty. He was preminently, and at one time with hopes of eucosa, before the Charleston convention as a condidate for the Presiden y, and it was never of jected to him that he fell ebert in Sou hern ideas, or in subserviency to the great Sombers party which subsequently chose the traitor Brechinrilge for its representative man. The North would have a right feel insufted if the State of Kentucky rhould send such a man to the Federal Senate, so long as he has a thou and criticeus equally able, more honest, and less ambitious.

We cannot fairly be charged with any want of worther would be continued to the expression of these view, as they must be cordially accepted by all hydrone to Kentucky. Waters Deeper In.—Everwatep taken in this giant treason filts deeper into the mire. Whom Mesonti passed an ordinance of secession, it was done as the act of the my prity, and, of course its constitutionality defended; but the Ruse II will Convention, claiming to speak for all Ecntucky, did not affect to represent a majority, and confeceed its acts to be those of rebellion. The St. Louis Republican says the secessionists of Kentucky have done previsely like their breither of Missouri—snapped their fingers at the "factious majority," and passed an ordinance of secession in spite of the pepular will. They have had their Convention and resolved divers things, smong others, declaring the patent fact that the Constitution and laws of the State of Kentucky are locompatible with the acts of the Confederal Congress.
